How Can an Executor of an Estate Be Removed?

An executor is the individual responsible for asset distribution to the appropriate parties following the death of the person whose estate is in question. The executor is responsible for the timely distribution of the assets in the estate to the appropriate parties. However, there are times when issues may arise related to the executor failing to properly execute their duties. Examples of these failures, as well as reasons an executor can be removed by the court, are examined in further detail below.
